14 AWARDS FOR QUALITY AND INNOVATION
Our Philosophy

Walking for pleasure is a glorious activity enjoyed by people of all ages. It is relaxing and good for the spirits and is now recognised as one way people can keep healthy and active throughout a long and satisfying life. It is the map that opens the door to exploration of new places enabling people to find enjoyment in fresh views, different countryside and interesting wildlife.

We set up the company in 1977 to produce maps that would give people the freedom to enjoy walking and running in open spaces. From the beginning we sought to make our maps clear and easy to read. We passionately believe a map should be an aid, not a challenge. Given British weather, we also said that they must be waterproof if they are to be used outdoors.

We think it vital that our maps are detailed, so users can find their way confidently. To be reliable they also need to be up-to-date. To achieve these aims we construct our maps from original air surveys. That way we can spend extra time on the contours, for example, and we leave off things you don’t need when you are using the map outdoors – so no parish boundaries.

For us, mapmaking is an art as much as a science. Our skilled team of cartographers concentrates on making each map pleasing to the eye, but above all serviceable and reliable.

This focus on practical use has been recognised over the years by 14 awards for quality and innovation. We are constantly on the lookout for ever better and more environmentally friendly materials and methods, new ways to show the information, and handier ways to fold the map sheet.

Users tell us that HARVEY maps are the best in the field when it comes to navigating in the hills. This is our aim. We invite you to try them for yourself and we believe you will join our fan club! Whatever the weather

How the maps are made

High tech, low beams

Advanced technology plus traditional craftsmanship go into the creation of HARVEY original mapping.

The whole mapmaking process is focused on providing the best possible map for walking, running and cycling. We have used the same craft approach for 40 years, though now it is digital, which speeds up the process and helps to lower cost.

Planning
We design the sheet layout to give you maximum interesting terrain on one sheet and a useful overlap to the next sheet.

Photogrammetry
Every detail is accurately plotted with painstaking care, selecting what is useful to people navigating the terrain.

Survey
The maps are given a ground field check to ensure they are up to date. Our experienced cartographers are themselves hillwalkers.

Layout and research
Extra useful information is added. We do the legwork for you.

Editing
On the computer the cartographer reviews the draft map, concentrating on ensuring it is clear and easy to read.

Printing
We select waterproof paper which will give you outstanding performance.

8 good reasons to use a HARVEY map

- Walking, running and cycling are quiet and environmentally friendly
- Exercise helps keep you healthy
- Walking makes you feel good physically and mentally
- A map is an inexpensive piece of essential kit
- Map reading is very satisfying
- A HARVEY map is simple and reliable - no batteries, buttons or cables
- A HARVEY map is light, waterproof and convenient
- HARVEY Maps are used by Skye, Lochaber, Glen Coe, Kintail, Killin, Ochils and Lake District Mountain Rescue Teams

Because HARVEY mapping is not based on other mapping, we can choose what to put on the map. We leave off administrative information so the maps are uncluttered.
